ACCIDENTALLY SHOT HUNTING MANY MEET THE TEACHERS

Boy Receives Fatal Injuries While Trying to Lift Weapon From Boat.

In a hurried attempt to pull a shotgun from a boat by grasping the barrel of the weapon, Albert Pischke, of Nekosha, the thirteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. August Pischke, received fatal injuries Sunday afternoon.

Albert and a number of companions were out hunting on the Robert-Rezin marsh; and when the boy started to lift his gun from a boat which they had been using on the reservoir it suddenly discharged, the shot tearing off young Pischke's right thumb and passing through the left side of his body just below the heart. It is believed that the hammer of the gun caught on the ear-lock of the boat.

The boy's companions carried him to the Rezin home and Dr. Waters of Nekosha, was summoned.

The unfortunate victim of the tragedy lived five hours and he died at about ten o'clock. The funeral services took place yesterday afternoon from the German Lutheran church at Nekosha.

Teachers Have Good Institute.

The rural teachers of the southern section of Wood county met at the Training school building Friday and Saturday, and both days of the institute were devoted to talks and exercises that were of great practical benefit to those who attended.

This is the beginning of Mr. Varney's third year as County Superintendent of Schools, and every year he aims to lay special emphasis upon some particular line of work. Last year and the year before he worked for a better and more systematic training in the manual and farm bookkeeping, and this year he is emphasizing the work of practical agriculture as applied to conditions in this county.

The basis for this work is a set of notes gathered together by Principal M. H. Jackson, who attended the farm course at Madison last year. The notes are taken from that course.

At this institute, practical demonstrations of many kinds were made. O. J. Leu, former county superintendent, gave the teachers experimental work with the Babcock milk test and also gave lectures on "Cows, Corn, and Clover." Mr. Leu is a practical farmer and he handled the subjects from the practical as well as the scientific standpoint.

Miss Agnes Breene, the new assistant at the County Normal, gave the institute some excellent suggestions in the teaching of penmanship and in school room decoration. It is the purpose of those in charge of the county normal to allow Miss Breene to spend a small portion of her time visiting country schools to confer with teachers and school boards on questions of school room decoration.

The work of the past year or two in agriculture at the normal will be still further strengthened during the coming year that the school may be more and more of a direct benefit to the farmers and their schools.

Supt. Varney is untiring in his efforts to raise the standard of the Wood county schools. An educational periodical, published at Pierce, South Dakota, names Wood county as one of the four foremost counties in introducing progressive ideas in school management and school organization.

Hunt in Bowling Alley.

While setting up pins in the east side bowling alleys Monday night, Clinton Mosher, the twelve year old son of Fred Mosher, was struck in the face by a pin and cut so severely that it was necessary for Dr. Waters to take three stitches. The boy says that he was rather tired, and got dizzy and rattled, neglecting to get out of the road when a swift ball came through.

Large Crowd Attends Reception For Teachers Given By The Parental Association.

The reception for teachers, given last Friday night at the Lincoln school building under the direction of the Parental Association, was a decided success in every way. About four hundred parents, students and teachers were present.

During the fore part of the evening the crowd gathered in the assembly hall and listened to short and interesting speeches by the Mayor, the President of the board of education, the state superintendent of schools, and the city superintendent.

Although it was the regular date for the election of new officers, a motion was passed to suspend all business of the school until a resolution of B. R. Goggin, introduced a resolution in behalf of the parents of the city, extending to the Mayor and Common Council, and others responsible for the construction of the new swimming pool a vote of appreciation. The resolution was passed unanimously.

Mayor Cohen, who was the first to speak, expressed great pleasure in seeing the parents and teachers together, and extended his congratulations to the Parental Association for the reception possible. He encouraged the students to do everything possible to make things agreeable and pleasant for their teachers.

President T. P. Witter, of the board of education, offered a cordial welcome to the teachers, both old and new, and emphasized the importance of the work of educating the young in order that they might be the useful citizens of the future, and closed his talk by encouraging the women of the city to take a more active part in school affairs and if possible to put up a candidate for member of the board.

The talk by Mr. Witter was followed by a twenty minute speech by C. P. Clary, state superintendent of schools, who complimented the parental association for their excellent work in bringing the parents of the city into closer touch with the teachers of their children. He remarked that very few cities throughout the state were doing that sort of thing, and that this was the first opportunity he had ever had to appear before that kind of a gathering. He spoke at some length of the relations between teacher and pupil, stating that misunderstandings can be remedied by a closer bond of friendship between the two. Mr. Clary exists among the people of today, and he emphasized the need of pleasure and entertainment in the home in order to prevent the children from seeking employment elsewhere.

"Make your home life attractive," said the speaker, "so that the children will be better fitted for life when they leave home permanently."

After Superintendent Clary had left for his train, Mr. Schwede, city superintendent of schools, was called upon for a few words. He remarked that for a few weeks he had been thinking of the work of the school, and that he would be glad to keep still, but felt it his place to compliment the association for their good work in bringing about a better acquaintance between the teachers and the parents. Mr. Schwede spoke briefly of the good attendance at the school this year and of the excellent spirit which prevails throughout.

George K. Gibson, president of the Parental Association, closed the speaking program with a few appropriate words of welcome to the teachers. He incidentally mentioned the fact that the organization of the association was due largely to the untiring efforts of Supt. Schwede, who saw the need of such a movement in this city.

Mr. Gibson presented the present of the Witter Music Hall for dancing and informal hand-shaking. Sucker's orchestra of five pieces furnished music for both parts of the evening's entertainment, and in accordance with the order of President Gibson, only waltzes and two-steps were danced.

Men Hold Banquet.

About forty men of the First Congregational church attended a banquet in the church rooms Monday evening. Supper consisting mainly of oyster stew and pumpkin pie was served at 6:30 o'clock, after which there was a round of informal speeches. C. C. Hayward was chosen as toast-master for the evening. The occasion was made even more enjoyable by music from a Victrola, the instrument being kindly furnished by J. E. Daly.

The purpose of the affair was to reorganize the Adult Bible Study Class for the coming year. Testimonials of the good work done by the organization were given by those present, and they are looking forward to a greater work this winter.

Clarine Settles Board Bill.

A. M. Clarine, the Law School solicitor, who was arrested in Le Crosse, a few weeks ago on a complaint sworn out by Mr. Gerow, of the Witter Hotel, settled his board bill, and paid all the necessary charges last night. His bill had been fixed at $400, and he had spent some time calling on his friends and communicating with his firm in an attempt to get somebody to go his bond. While in the care of the county, Clarine went out with the rest of the gang and worked on the street, but is now free to continue his former line.

Good Cheese Exhibit.

Ten different kinds of cheese displayed by 200 exhibitors, constituted the best cheese exhibit ever put up at the state fair. It is interesting to note that the cheese put up by Joseph Zimmerman, of the town of Carson, drew a marking of 92, or only 4.58 below the highest.

Arm Broken.

William Goggin, son of Attorney B. R. Goggin, is carrying his right arm in a sling as a result of an unfortunate accident Monday night. The boy was riding his wheel home from one of the neighbors and was carrying an armful of books when he fell from the bicycle on to the cement sidewalk. His arm was broken just below the elbow.

BOWLERS HAVE A MEETING WOMAN SOCIALIST SPEAKS

Local Enthusiasts Will Bend Every Effort to Bring The State Tournament Here Two Years Hence.

Thirty-five bowling enthusiasts met at the Elks club rooms last Wednesday night to reorganize the league and make extensive plans for the approaching season. The old officers were re-elected—Wm. F. Glue, president, Chas. Nash, secretary, and Frank Abel, treasurer.

An executive committee was selected to arrange a schedule of games, and have the schedule printed and placed in the hands of every member of the league. This committee consisted of E. B. Redford, Warren Fisher, and Wm. Heath.

A crowd of boosters from Port Edwards were at the meeting and entered two teams in the league.

It was voted to charge $7.00 initiation fees for each team, and all teams who intend to enter the league are required to report and pay their dues before October 2nd. There were about seven teams represented at the meeting, and it is believed that with the two from Port Edwards there will be between ten and twelve teams in the league before the week is up.

The games this season will be bowled on the East and West side alleys, and at Port Edwards. The alleys on the east side are now owned by Fred Mosher who purchased them of Peerenboom and Mulroy.

Another meeting will be held tomorrow night at which time the question of lifting the number of teams will be decided upon. The matter of prizes will also be dealt with. Each alley owner has already pledged ten dollars toward prizes and it is likely that others will come across.

Grand Rapids will have the state bowling tournament year after next, the people of the city will put a shield on the wheel. The whole success of the project will depend upon the popularity that is aroused. Perhaps the majority little realize the benefits that would be derived from having in this city an assemblage of bowlers from every important city in the state. The boys made quite a bid for it last year at Beaver Dam, but it is probable that Shoyebyan will have it after Madison.

It is fortunate that Mr. Peerenboom of this city, is one of the eight members of the state executive committee and is therefore in a good position to represent our cause. We also have the support of Secretary Langtry, of the American Bowling Congress, who hopes to see the northern end of this state thus give added strength to the state as a whole. Mr. Langtry was formerly a Wisconsin boy and is anxious to see his home state put up a good showing at the national meets.

The Grand Rapids league will send four or five good teams to Madison this year, and with the help of the newly acquired Port Edwards aggregation, there is no reason why this city should not gain some recognition at Madison in February. If a good showing is made we will be in the lead for the state meet as soon as Shoyebyan is through with it.

The bowlers of Grand Rapids are urging the strongest support from the city at large and it looks as though the support is duly forthcoming. At Beaver Dam last February, at the state tournament, there were 6,000 games rolled, lasting three successive weeks. Men from all over the state and from all walks in life were there, and the event was a fine thing for the city, a business way as well as from the point of view of the sportsman.

Passing of Wm. Schacht.

On September 24 at 3:30 o'clock p. m. at his home one mile south of the city of Grand Rapids, occurred the death of Mr. Wm. Schacht, deceased. He was born in 1851 and was therefore in his 62nd year. His early boyhood was spent on his father's farm in his native land.

After serving in the German army four years, he married Miss Mary Scheller of West Prussia, Germany, who preceded him in death in 1908. Of this union eight children were born, six of whom now live in Grand Rapids, and two in the state of Washington. While in America he followed farming, locating in Wood county about 24 years ago where he remained until his death. He was well known in Grand Rapids, and to know him was to love and respect him.

About 14 years ago he was married to Mrs. J. Kayser of this town who now survives him. Mr. Schacht was kind father and husband and loved by all who knew him. He will be greatly missed by his many friends and especially by his family to whom we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

One More Game This Season.

The last ball game of the season will be played on Sunday afternoon at the ball park between Nekosha and Grand Rapids. This game will be a benefit game for the players and all loyal fans should turn out and give the boys a boost for winning the pennant for Grand Rapids. Batteries for Grand Rapids will be Nelson and Nier, and Pelot and Crows for Nekosha. Game will be called at three o'clock. Umpire Alex Bandelin.

Church Notice.

A meeting of the members and congregation of the First Congregational church of this city is called to meet in the main auditorium room on Sunday next, October 5th, at eleven o'clock a. m., to receive and act upon the report of the committee selected to recommend a pastor. All interested in the work of the church are invited to be present.

Rusk County Draws Prize.

The agricultural exhibit from Rusk county took first prize, week before last, at the Northern Wisconsin State Fair held at Chippewa Falls. The exhibit consisted wholly of the articles which were reserved from the county fair at which the town of Atlanta drew first. The people of this city will be especially interested in Rusk county's good score, as much of the land of the Arpin Bros. is located in that region.

WOMAN SOCIALIST SPEAKS

Mrs. Kate R. O'Hara Gives Direct and Convincing Talk on Present Day Questions.

The Church of today is losing its influence over the human race, it is losing in membership and power in the pulpit, and it has lost the loyalty and allegiance of the working class. It has failed to solve the social problems which confront it.

Vice is protected not only by police departments of our cities, but by all the executive departments of our government, and is an instrument used to pay the political debts and fill the pockets of respected politicians.

These are some of the opinions held by Mrs. Kate R. O'Hara, who spoke to a large audience at the Baptist church last Thursday night. The speaker was eloquent, direct, and convincing, and showed a thorough acquaintance with the problems she has investigated with a socialist's general education. As well as a socialist she showed an excellent knowledge of the principles of that political party.

Mrs. O'Hara, as well as her husband, is a speaker who is well known throughout this country. She is editor of the National Rip-Saw, and a prominent investigator of the great social problems of the day. Plain and straightforward, she has not sensational or fanatical voices her own ideas and puts them up to her hearers in a way that is impressive, logical, and convincing.

"THE PINK LADY."

Foremost among the notable productions of the season at Daly's theatre will be the presentation here on Oct. 23 of the big New American Theatre production of that most popular of musical comedies, "The Pink Lady," under the management of John C. Fisher. Fresh from its triumphs during the long run at the Globe Theatre in London and the more recent engagement at the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York, the delightful play comes here with many of the New York and London favorites in the company, including James McMillon, as Donalder, the antique dealer; Miss Olga de Baugh as Claudine, the lady in pink; Alfred Deery as Lucien Gardier; Miss Georgia Harvey as Mme. Donalder; and Jack Hall as Theodore Lebec. The company will be large, and the production, in the way of scenery and costumes, will be new throughout, the costumes reflecting the very latest ideas in fashions.

Some plays are rich in musical numbers but lack in story, while others, with a good story, lack fetching music. "The Pink Lady," more so than any play of its sort in recent years, is happy both in its book and in its music. Without a note of music it would be a highly interesting and diverting farce. The music is conceded to be the best. Both from a musical standpoint and in popular appeal, that Ivan Carrvill has composed. In the book C. M. S. McEllan is at his best. As a matter of course the production by John C. Fisher is upon a sumptuous and artistic scale, far more elaborate and harmonious than you have been accustomed to see in the theatre. The scenes of "The Pink Lady" are laid in the gardens of Le Joli Caucou, a popular residence in the Forest of Compiègne, France, in an antique shop in the Rue St. Honoré, Paris; and in that Parisian land of Bohemia, on the left bank of the Seine, the Latin Quarter. The story of the play cannot be outlined in a paragraph but, to put it briefly, it concerns the troubles of a sedate old dealer in antique who despite himself, is desperately involved in a gay, young Parisian bachelor's efforts to deceive his fiancée and incidentally to rid himself of an inamorata of former days, the lady in pink.

Owing to the exceptional importance of this engagement it is suggested by the management that early seat reservations should be made.

Firemen to Make Inspections.

A new enactment by the state legislature compels all city fire departments to inspect buildings and report on them concerning the thickness of the walls, the number of doors and windows, fire escapes, and other points regarding the safety and fire-proof qualities. A state fire inspector will visit the city at regular intervals and check over the reports.

The firemen of this city held a meeting Monday evening and arranged for a committee to make a report on the work of inspection here in Grand Rapids. The work will probably go on in two's, the work being divided among them according to streets. The buildings in the fire limit district will be visited quarterly, the first inspection to commence within a few days. Residences will be inspected twice a year, beginning about the first of the year.

It is important that the work should be commenced immediately, in order to retain for the local firemen their regular two per cent allowance on fire insurance sold in this city.

Grand Rapids Wins Series.

The final game of the season was a walk-away for the home boys, resulting in a score of 6 to 0, and leaving the pennant at the feet of the Grand Rapids aggregation. A crowd of over 700 watched the game, including many who came down in a special train from Marshfield.

Quarrels, somewhat ruffled over the salary question, went to bed among friends, and the popular verdict among fans seems to be that Quarrels was the whole team. Armstrong, his successor, got away with two strike-outs against eleven by a throw. Marshfield saw second base once, and that was the closest they came to getting in a round trip all during the game.

Rev. C. A. Mellicke Will Remain.

A call from the First Church of Philadelphia was extended to Rev. C. A. Mellicke during the past week. Although the charge would have been one of the best in the East, Mr. Mellicke has decided to remain in this community.

In refusing the call he gives as his reason that the Philadelphia church, with its wealth and influence, is better able to secure the kind of a man they want, than is the church in this city.

Mr. Mellicke's many friends in this city will be glad to hear that he will continue his excellent work here.

Good Entertainers.

The Thomas-McDonald-Jackson famous rapline, which closed its four days engagement at the Bijou Sunday night gave some very good little entertainments, and were well worth the ten cents. Their acts were pleasing, and their music was strong and clean. Jack McDonald, the cellist, Mrs. Donald, the comedienne, and Thomas, the Black Panther, were all good in their respective lines. They played to a packed house every night.

Count! Count! Count!!!

Yes, they are coming and will be here Friday and Saturday this week. ## FUND TO AID FARMER

MEAT PACKERS' ASSOCIATION
VOTES $500,000 TO SHOW
PROFITS IN BEEF.

TO LOWER COST OF LIVING

Convention in Chicago Asserts Government Help in Increasing Meat Prices by Demanding Change of Labels Too Often.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—Five hundred thousand dollars was voted on Monday by the American Meat Packers' association, in session here, to stimulate cattle raising. This step was taken as the result of the situation which the packers declare confronts the country—a meat famine by 1923—and to lower the high cost of living.

This was decided by the meat packers on Monday at their annual convention, on the motion of Gustav Bischoff, Sr., of the Independent Packing company, St. Louis, president of the organization.

In making his motion for the creation of an educational fund Mr. Bischoff pointed out that the farmers are not raising beef cattle because they do not consider it profitable.

"What the farmers of the country need is education along the lines of how to operate their farms," said Mr. Bischoff. "They imagine that the only way they can make both ends meet is to raise an abundance of grains and feed no beef cattle."

"As a matter of fact, there is not a farmer in the land who could not raise a few head of cattle to good advantage. What the farmers need is education. With this in mind, I move that a fund of $500,000 be voted for a period of five years, to be expended among the farmers in a campaign of education. Until the farmers raise cattle for beef, the price of meat cannot be lowered. As long as the supply is scant the price must be necessary be high."

The motion to create the $500,000 educational fund was carried by unanimous vote, and President Bischoff will appoint a committee to devise ways and means for carrying out this work.

Another pucker was on the farmer's face when the high cost of meat was discussed. Charles F. Kamrath of Spokane, Wash., said:

"If every farmer could be induced to raise one or two beef steers, the high cost of meat would be almost solved," he said.

M. A. Traylor, vice-president of the National Stock Yards National bank, East St. Louis, Ill., recommended that banks be empowered to loan money on future cattle shipments, the same as they now do on grain crops.

James S. Agar, chairman of a special committee appointed at the last session of the association to confer with government officials as to the cause of the high price of meat, said that meat was sold at a higher figure because the government demanded frequent changing of labels.

Fearsome forecasts of a possible famine pervaded the assembly. The more direct danger note was sounded on Sunday when James Craig, Jr., chairman of the association's executive committee, read the annual report of that body to the convention.

TROOPS STOP RACE RIOTING

Polish Miners Beaten by Americans, Following Double Murder at Benton, Ill.

Benton, Ill., Sept. 24.—A race riot between American and Polish miners was begun on the town square here on Monday as a result of the double murder Sunday of Ewell Hutchins and Quincey Drummonds, who were killed by a band of drunken miners while returning from a Polish dance, where they had furnished the music.

The disturbance assumed such proportions that Mayor Bates swore in 25 extra police and sent for the sheriff of Franklin county. The mayor then mounted a box in the center of the square and sought to pacify the Americans.

Twenty-five foreigners, who appeared on the square, were beaten and pursued to their homes in the Polish colony. Every other foreigner who was found on the streets met similar treatment.

In making the announcement Jerome said that he is endeavoring to secure an indictment against the man who conceived the plan for Thaw's escape, and for this reason had asked that the indictment against Thaw be kept secret as long as possible.

After hearing the arguments of counsel for both sides, Governor Feltner received judgment and announced that he would not make public his decision until next Monday at least.

In opening the argument Jerome said that the duty of Governor Feltner to grant the petition of New York for the extradition of Thaw was plain. He then made his announcement concerning the conspiracy indictment.

During the course of his argument against extradition former Governor Stone of Pennsylvania, chief counsel for Thaw, accused Jerome of deceit and trickery in the conduct of the case.

William M. Chase of Concord, former judge of the supreme court, followed Mr. Stone in arguing for Thaw. He declared bribery had also been committed. "A man vastly more important than any yet mentioned" has been drawn into the net, which New York has agreed to catch, which New York has agreed to catch, which New York has agreed to catch.

Many Requests for Bulletins. Thousands of boys and girls, young men and women in Wisconsin who for one reason or another are deprived of the advantages of a course of agriculture, are keeping fully informed on the latest developments and discoveries in the agricultural field.

During a single day requests were received by the agricultural extension service for 1,323 bulletins of which number 642 were circulars of information, 102 United States government bulletins and 579 Wisconsin bulletins. Bulletins most popular with the young people of the state are those which have to do with the use of the Babcock test, corn judging and the curing and testing of seed corn.

Oconomowoc Has Humane Society. A county branch of the Wisconsin Humane society has been formed in Oconomowoc and the officers elected are: President, Dr. W. R. Wilkins; Vice-President, Miss R. Julia Adams; second vice-president, Mrs. M. Kartak; secretary-treasurer, Miss Ruby Dibble.

Tanner Heads Accountant's Board. The Wisconsin state board of accountancy, created by the legislature, was organized by the election of John B. Tanner, president; Henry Schneider, vice-president, and Prof. Stephen W. Gilman, secretary. This board is to take up all applicants for certification to practice as certified public accountants.

Cheese Industry Good. C. Marty of the dairy department, University of Wisconsin, who acted as judge in the cheese class at the state fair, declared that the 142 entries of American cheese represented an average score of 92.67; the 23 exhibits of Block and Drum Swiss 93.9; the 20 block cheese 92.5, and the nine Limburger 92.34.

Although the exhibit was large the appearance of the cheese was very good, showing that the factory operators are doing their part in making a good product.

State Patents. The following list of patents recently granted to inventors in Wisconsin: John J. Aeschlimann, Menomonie, wrench; Harry W. Bolens, Port Washington, make and break lighter; Niels Christensen, Milwaukee, internal combustion engine; Charles R. Harrison, Fond du Lac, railway post office car construction; Philip A. Koehring, Milwaukee, concrete distributor; George M. Patton, Milwaukee, sawmill carriage offset; Uriah Roberts, Columbia, negative outline indicating device.

Road Work for Convicts. Convict labor from the Wisconsin state prison will be used on the roads of Wisconsin early next year and possibly later this season, according to Governor McGovern.

In speaking of the prison labor the governor said that the commission was now working on the problem, and while it was possible that some of the prisoners might be liberated this fall for road purposes that in all probability the move would not take place until spring.

Want Convicts for Highway.

Madison.—The Racine Commercial club has petitioned Governor McGovern to permit the employment of convicts in improving Racine county highways this fall. The county is to spend $75,000 in road improvement.

An accident which cost the lives of two men at the Racine county gravel pit at Burlington delayed the work two months and the county officials want convict labor in order to rush the improvements to completion this fall.

The Commercial club raised, with state aid, a fund of over $50,000 for the improvement of the Lake Shore road to make it a part of the big Milwaukee-Chicago boulevard. This work will not be done until next spring.

It is proposed to place the prisoners at work on the roads in the eastern and central parts of the county. Sheriff Sherry will have charge of the convicts should they come.

Law Will Be in Operation October 1. The Wisconsin law regulating the sale of securities, popularly known as the blue sky law, will become effective October 1. The railroad commission of Wisconsin is the body charged with the administration of the law, and is now preparing blanks to be used in complying with it.

The law is in two more or less distinct parts, one affecting dealers in corporate securities, and the other affecting companies which sell their own securities. In the case of dealers, a license from the railroad commission is required, while in the case of companies the requirement is that certain information regarding the affairs of the company be submitted to the commission, and that its business is lawful and conducted in a lawful manner is to be excluded from doing business in the state.

Applicants for dealers' licenses will be required to show that the securities they propose to deal in and to file lists of the agents who are to represent them in Wisconsin. These lists of securities and of agents are to be kept up to date, and in addition periodic reports will undoubtedly be required of dealers showing what securities they have sold in Wisconsin.

It will not be necessary for agents to obtain licenses themselves, since the law as recently interpreted by the attorney general contemplates the licensing only of the principal and not of the agent.

It is not the intent of the law that the private affairs of the dealer should be inquired into except as such inquiry may be necessary in isolated cases where the integrity of the dealer is doubtful, nor will it be necessary in the case of securities of good standing for the commission to make an extended investigation before permitting the dealer to dispose of them in the state.

In the case of companies selling their own securities, however, the law intends a much more searching investigation and gives the commission broad powers of examination. It will be necessary to obtain from such companies statements of their assets and liabilities, and to obtain a description of the property which they own. It will also be necessary in case of companies already in operation to find out the financial results of their operations in the past. Their plan of selling securities, prices to be obtained for the securities, etc., as well as their general plan of doing business, will be the subject of inquiry.

Expect Large Attendance. Although no figures were announced at the end of the first day of registration, it was stated that the attendance at the University of Wisconsin would be exceptionally heavy this year, judging from the number of early registrations.

Freshmen by the hundreds took main hall by storm until it was all the register could do, even to take care of the students. According to unofficial estimates nearly 1,300 had signed up. An unusually large number of students from the eastern and southern parts of the country enrolled.

Among the important changes which greeted both old and new students were the strides toward the completion of several new university buildings. Barnard hall, the new women's dormitory, is now ready to accommodate 150 coeds. A feature of the new dormitory is the large number of rooms especially fitted out for fudge making.

The $90,000 addition to the chemistry building is also ready for use. The new north wing of the university library is now practically completed.

Victory Commission Plans Meet. There will be a meeting of the state victory commission at Madison, Saturday, September 27. Howard Teasdale, chairman of the commission, will preside. The meeting will be held in the morning. Prof. C. P. Norgord of the agronomy department of the college of agriculture gave an address on "Seed and Cows and Stock Improvement." Prof. Halpin spoke upon "Raising Chickens."

Racine.—Coal gas from the kitchen stove caused the death here of Mrs. Bridget Ryan, widow, aged ninety-one, and Mrs. Michael Feenhey, aged sixty-eight, who were found dead at the home of the former. Mrs. Feenhey was called to assist Mrs. Ryan, who had been ill for some time, and decided to spend the night. Michael Feenhey called for his wife and forced the door open to discover both of them dead.

Racine.—The Commercial club has asked Governor McGovern to permit the employment of convicts in improving Racine county highways this fall.

Appleton.—Despite reports sent out from Madison that labor is leaving Wisconsin on account of lack of work, Appleton contractors are unable to get a reply from the state labor bureau, where the report originated, to their appeal for labor, says Capt. Charles A. Green.

Appleton.—While walking on the Soo track, near Armstrong creek, George Stone, aged thirty, of this city, was stricken with heart failure and fell in front of a passenger train. He was ground to pieces. Stone was on his way to secure medical aid for a friend.

Marquette.—Prof. F. W. A. Notz, Northwestern university, has received an unusual attention from the University of Tuebingen, Germany, from which he received the degree of doctor of philosophy 50 years ago. The anniversary falls on September 30. He has been sent him a renewal of the original degree, equivalent to an honorary degree.

Ellsworth.—Directors of the Price county stock exhibit have warned exhibitors of the great amount of hog cholera in the county and advised them against showing their swine at the present county fair.

Awards Made to Widows. Under a workmen's compensation award made by the industrial commission, the Edgerton Electric Light company sent $2,740 to Mrs. Louise Pearce, widow of Frank L. Pearce, who was killed by a fall from a pole on August 15, 1913, eleven days after his marriage.

Mrs. Milka Podunje was awarded $2,400 for the death of her husband, who was killed by a fall from a pole on the Milwaukee Coke & Gas company for the death of her husband, killed July 28.

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Varney, wife of a Confederate general, has lost one son in another dying from wounds. She reluctantly gives her consent for Wilfred, the youngest son, to join the army if his father consents. The federalists are making their last assault on Richmond. The army is in a desperate effort to capture Richmond. Wilfred Varney secures from President Davis a commission for Capt. Thorne, who is just recovering from wounds, as chief of staff. He tells him he has been ordered away. She declares he must not go and tells him the commission from the president. He is strangely agitated and declares the cause of his leaving the room to get the commission, but is prevented by the arrival of Caroline. Wilfred's sweetheart, Mr. Arrelsford of the Confederate army, is a rejected suitor of Wilfred's sister, Mrs. Varney's daughter, Caroline. The note reveals that the commission is a telegram. Arrelsford declares Thorne is Lewis Dumont of the Federal secret service, and that his brother Henry is a prisoner in Wilfred's hands. He refuses to be released and suggests that Thorne be confronted with the prisoner as a test. An order comes from General Varney for Wilfred to report to the front at once. Wilfred is forced to carry out his part in the test of Thorne. The prisoner is then taken to the prison along with Thorne. Thorne recognizes him as his elder brother. Then Thorne's father, General Varney, kills him. Thorne goes to the war department and sends a telegram to Wilfred.

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Arrelsford Again Interposes.
Nobody had any time to devote to Miss Mitford just then, for a perfect rain of messages came and went as she slowly composed her own dispatch. Messengers constantly came in while others went out. The lines were evidently busy that night. Finally there came a pause in the dispatches coming and going, and Foray remembering her, looked over toward the other end of the table where she sat.

"In that message of yours ready yet, Miss Mitford?" he asked.
"Yes," said Caroline, rising and folding up the paper. "Of course you have got to take it."
"Certainly," returned the operator smiling. "If it's to be sent, I have to send it."
"Well, here it is then," said the girl, extending the folded paper which Lieutenant Foray took and unceremoniously opened.

"Oh!" exclaimed Caroline, quickly snatching the paper from his hand, "didn't tell you you could read it?"

Foray stared at her in amazement.

"What do you want me to do with it?"

"I want you to send it."

"Well, how am I going to send it if I don't read it?"

"Do you mean to say that—" began

"I didn't tell you you could read it," the girl, who had evidently forgotten—if she had ever known—how telegrams were sent.

"I mean to say that I have got to spell out every word of the key. Didn't you know that?"

"Oh, I did, of course—I but I had forgotten," said Caroline, dismayed by this unexpected development.

"He there any harm in my reading the message that I have to send?"

"Why I wouldn't have you see it for the world! My gracious!"

It is as bad as that, Miss Mitford?" he said laughing.

"Lead! It isn't bad at all, but I wouldn't have it get all over town for anything."

"It will never get out of this office, Miss Mitford," returned Foray composedly. "We are not allowed to mention anything that goes on in here."

"You wouldn't mention it?"

"Certainly not. All sorts of private messages go through here, and—"

"Do they?"

"Every day. Now if that telegram is important—"

"Well, I should think it was. It is the most important—"

"Then I reckon you had better trust it to me," said Lieutenant Foray.

"Yes," said Caroline, blushing a vivid crimson, "I reckon I had."

She handed him the telegram. He opened it, glanced at it, bit his lips, and then his hands reached for the key.

"Oh, stop!" cried Caroline.

Foray looked at her, his eyes full of amusement, his whole body shaking with suppressed laughter, which she was too wrought up to perceive.

"Well, all right, don't want to be here while you spell out every word—I couldn't stand that."

Caroline had evidently forgotten that the spelling would be in the Morse code, and that it would be about as intelligible to her as Sanskrit. The lieutenant, however, later waited while Caroline turned to ward the door and summoned Martha to her. She did not leave the room, however, for her way was barred by a young private in a gray uniform. The newcomer looked hastily at her and the old negro, stopped by them and asked them very respectfully to wait a moment. He then approached Foray, who impatiently waited until he could deliver the message. He saluted him and handed him a written order, and then crossed to the other side of the room. A glance put Foray in possession of the contents of this order. He rose to his feet and approached Caroline, still standing by the door.

"Miss Mitford," he said.

"Yes."

"I don't understand this, but here is an order that has just come from the secret service department directing me to hold up any dispatch you may try to send."

"Hold back my telegram?"

"Yes, Miss Mitford," and Foray looked very embarrassed as he stared again at the order and then from the young girl to the orderly, "and that isn't the worst of it."

"What else is there?" asked the girl, her eyes big with apprehension.

"Why, this man has orders to take back your message with him to the secret service office."

"Take back my message!" cried Caroline.

"There must be some mistake," answered Foray, "but that's what the order says."

"To whom does it say to take it back?" asked the girl, growing more and more indignant.

"To Mr. Arrelsford."

"Do you mean to tell me that that order is for that man to take my dispatch back to Mr. Arrelsford?"

"Yes, Miss Mitford," returned Lieutenant Foray.

"And does it say anything in there about what I am going to do in the meantime?" asked the girl indignantly.

"Nothing!"

"Well, that is too bad," returned Caroline ominously.

"I am sorry this has occurred, Miss Mitford," said the lieutenant earnestly, "but the orders are signed by the head of the secret service department, and you will see that I have no choice."

"Don't worry about it, Lieutenant Foray," said Caroline calmly, "there is no need of your feeling sorry, because it hasn't occurred, beside that, it is not going to occur. When it does, you can go around being sorry all you like. Have you the faintest idea that I am going to let him take my telegram away from me?"

"Do you suppose—"

She was too indignant to finish her sentence and old Martha valiantly entered the fray.

"No, suh," she cried, in her deepest and most indignant voice. "You all ain't going to do it, you kin be right suh, you kin!"

"What do you want me to do?" persisted Foray, greatly distressed.

"You can hand it back to me, that's what you can do."

"Yes, suh, dat's de vohy best thing you kin do," said old Martha stoutly, "an' de soonah you do it de quickah it'll be done—Ah kin tell you dat right now suh!"

"But this man has come here with orders for me to—" began Foray, endeavoring to explain.

He realized that there was some mistake somewhere. The girl's message had nothing whatever to do with military matters, and he quite understood that she would not want this communication read by every Tom, Dick or Harry in the secret service department. Besides all this, as she stood before him, her face flushed with emotion, she was a sufficiently pleasing figure to make him most willing to help her. In addition, the pretty figure of old Martha, whose cheeks doubtless would have been flushed with the same feeling had they not been black, were more than disconcerting.

"This man," said Caroline, shaking her finger at helpless Private Eddinger, who also found his position most unpleasant, "can go straight back where his came from and report to Mr. Arrelsford that he could not carry out his orders. That's what he can do."

Martha, now thoroughly aroused to a sense of the role she was to play, turned and confronted the abashed private.

"Jes! let him try to tek it. Let him tek it if he wants it so powful bad! Jes! let de othah one dare gib it to him—an' den see him try an' git out thur dis yoah do! wid it! Ah wants to see him go by," she said. "Ah'm jes waitin' fur de sight ob him git thur," she said. "Dis do! Dis what Ah's waitin' for! Ah'd lak to know what dey s'pose it was Ah comed around yoah for anyway—dese men wid dese ordahs 'fussin' an'—"

"Miss Mitford," said Foray earnestly, "if I were to give this dispatch back to you it would get me in a heap of trouble."

"What kind of trouble?" asked Caroline dubiously.

"I might be put in prison, I might be shot."

"Do you mean that they would—"

"Sure to do one thing or another."

"Just message?"

"Just for that."

"Then you will have to keep it, I suppose," said Caroline entreatingly.

"Thank you, Miss Mitford."

"Very well," said Caroline, "it is understood. You do give it back to me, and you can't give it back to him, so nobody's disobeying any orders at all. And that's the way it stands. I reckon I can stay as long as he can. She stepped to a nearby chair and sat down. "I haven't very much to do and probably he has."

"But, Miss Mitford—" began Foray.

"There isn't any good talking any longer. If you have got any telegrams to do you had better do it now, I won't disturb you. But don't you give it to him."

Foray stared at her helplessly. What might have resulted it is impossible to say, for there entered at that moment Mr. Arrelsford, relieving himself, relieving Mr. Foray of the further conduct of the intricate case. His glance took in all the occupants of the room. It was to his own messenger that he first addressed himself.

"Eddinger!"

"Yes, Mr. Arrelsford."

"Didn't you get here in time?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then why—"

"I beg your pardon," said Foray, "are you Mr. Arrelsford of the secret service department?"

"Yes. Are you holding back a dispatch?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why didn't Eddinger bring it to me?"

"Well, you see—" began Foray, hesitating. "Miss Mitford—"

Arrelsford instantly comprehended. "Eddinger," he said.

"Yes, sir."

"Report back to Corporal Matson and tell him to send a surgeon to the prisoner who was wounded at General Varney's house, if he isn't dead by this time. Now let me see that dispatch," he continued, as the orderly saluted and ran rapidly from the room.

But again Miss Mitford interposed. She stepped quickly between Arrelsford and Foray, both of whom fell back from her.

"I expect," she said impudently, "that you think you are going to get my telegram and read it?"

"I certainly intend to do so," was the curt answer.

"Well, there's a great disappointment looming up in front of you," returned Caroline defiantly.

"So!" said Arrelsford, with growing suspicion. "You have been trying to send out something that you don't want me to see."

"That if I have, sir?"

"Just this," said Arrelsford determinedly. "You won't send it out and I will see it. This is a case—"

"This is a case where nobody is going to read my private writing," persisted Caroline.

"Do you want to see the ship with a blazing eye and a man like a snail?"

Arrelsford looked at her with ill-concealed yet somewhat vexatious amusement.

"Lieutenant Foray, you have an order to give me that dispatch. Bring it to me at once."

Although it was quite evident that Foray greatly disliked the role he was compelled to play, his orders were plain, and he had no option. He stepped slowly toward the secret service agent, only to be confronted by old Martha, who again interrupted.

"Don't dare to tek it, jes what he is," said the old negro defiantly.

A struggle with her would have been an unseemly spectacle indeed, thought both men.

"Is that Miss Mitford's dispatch you have in your hand?" asked Arrelsford.

"Yes, sir."

"Since you can't hand it to me, read it."

Caroline turned to him with a gasp of horror. Martha gave way, and Foray stood surprised.

"Read it out! Don't you hear me?" repeated Arrelsford peremptorily.

"Don't dare to tek it, jes what he is," said the old negro defiantly.

"No, suh! He ain't got no business to read her letters, none whatsover!" urged Martha.

"Silence!" roared Arrelsford, his patience at an end. "If either of you Proud of Them.

We can no longer think, with Pericles, that good report for a woman means a minimum of any kind of report about her, whether for good, or evil, nor with Dr. Johnson that when she speaks in public she is "like a being lowered. One of the lifeboats is equipped with a wireless, telegraph system having a range of 200 miles, the antennae being a telescopic mast. This lifeboat will serve as the flagship of the fleet of life boats in case of a wreck."

Caroline turned to him with a gasp of horror. Martha gave way, and Foray stood surprised.

interfere any further with the business of this office I will have you both put under arrest. Read that dispatch instantly, Lieutenant Foray."

"The game was up, so far as the women were concerned. Caroline's head sank on Martha's shoulder and she sobbed passionately, while Lieutenant Foray read the following astonishing and incriminating message.

"Forgive me, Wilfred, darling, please forgive me and I will help you all I can."

It was harmless, as harmless as it was foolish, that message, but it evidently impressed Mr. Arrelsford as containing some deep, some hidden, some sinister meaning.

"That dispatch can't go," he said shortly.

"That dispatch can go," said Caroline, stopping her sobbing as suddenly as she had begun. "And that dispatch will go. I know some one whose orders even you are bound to respect, and some one who will come here with me and see that you do it."

"It may be," answered Arrelsford.

"Yes, sir."

"Why didn't Eddinger bring it to me?"
